

2009-2010 Center of Excellence for Allied Health Continuing Education WEBINAR

“Best/Promising Practices for Healthcare”
Emerging Issues, Trends, and Promising Practices

April 19 – May 28, 2010

CALL FOR PRESENTATION PROPOSALS

Be part of a new trend in conferences that offer quality presentations and networking opportunities while saving both presenters and attendees’ time and money. Present new and innovative Best/Promising practices in a modern and efficient way to create a lasting product for your own practice.

In this time of budget cuts and reduced spending, web-based conferences allow people access to new developments and research on their own time schedule in the comfort of their home or office.

Key Objectives:

- ◆ Provide information on emerging challenges for those in leadership, administrative, managerial and educational positions.
- ◆ Showcase educational and administrative innovations and promising practices.
- ◆ Deliver useful information, tools, and resources that can be utilized in the participants’ work setting.
- ◆ To highlight the use of ‘Best Practice’ standards within educational healthcare programs and industry services.
- ◆ Strategies that deal with the shortages of healthcare workers in select areas, the retirement and increased health care needs of the baby boomer generation, or with healthcare reforms that will impact healthcare education in our state.

Web-Based Presentation Format:

Chosen presenters will be contacted by February 8. The process of turning your presentation into a stand-alone version that will be used for this webinar will then begin. Presenters will provide a PowerPoint presentation and an audio recording of their presentation to the CoE. The presenter is also responsible for providing at least three discussion questions and a short post-session assessment.

We'll be asking presenters for the following:

- ◆ A voice recording of your presentation to accompany the PowerPoint.
- ◆ Two or three discussion questions for the discussion board.
- ◆ A short multiple choice or true/false post-presentation assessment made up of five to ten questions. This will be used as a way for participants to review all of the main points of the presentation and as a way to check their attendance for awarding clock hours or continuing education credits.

Presentation guidelines and examples of how to create effective web presentations are available on our website at www.yvcc.edu/coe. On this page you will find a link to an electronic proposal form to complete and email to the Center of Excellence for Allied Health.

The webinar will extend over a six week period. Each week several presentations will be available for the attendees. Attendees will have access to a discussion board dedicated to the session to share their responses to the presenter's question as well as share their own experiences and ideas about the topic.

Before the webinar begins we will have your presentation and discussion board set up for you in an Angel classroom. During the week when each presentation is available the presenter will be expected to answer questions posted on their presentation discussion board. You will be able to view and familiarize yourself with the discussion board setup prior to April 19. Assistance will be provided to all our presenters to become acquainted to the new online format.

The presentations used in this webinar will remain available for viewing throughout the conference and will be archived on the Center of Excellence for Allied Health website for future viewing.
